The first ever African Boating Conference hit the shores of Cape Town this month and has been hailed as a great success. With over 80 attendees, predominantly from the industry as well as government departments, the event consisted of a full day's worth of workshops and interactive sessions. Held in conjunction with CTBi's AGM and Annual Awards Dinner, the conference was complementary, and open to the entire industry, with CTBi members receiving priority. Divided into three sessions, attendees were able to elect specific workshops or enjoy the conference as a whole. Some of the programme's highlights were as follows:

- The Boatbuilding Academy at FBC offered an interactive skills development session. This consisted of a presentation of the courses currently offered by the academy, as well as a lively discussion regarding present training loopholes in the sector.
- Uli Heineman from IMCI and Peter Jacobs offered a presentation on the combined NMMA and CE Certification as well as one on MCA and the Australian certification.
- A panel discussion took place regarding the present regulatory environment impacting small craft, with particular reference to SAMSAs requirements and the application thereof by various bodies.
- Lloyd Williams from Caudwell Marine presented the revolutionary new Axis Drive, which was developed and manufactured in Cape Town. This was followed by a discussion on technical trends and other new innovations and projects in the sector.
- The DTI offered a presentation on various export incentives, which was followed by a panel discussion on import duties, bonded warehouses and rebates.
- RSB Insurance and Totalserve Management led a discussion on the hot topic of financing within the sector. This session also covered issues such as insurance options, vessel tracking, and international insurance.

The line-up drew guests from far afield, such as Roger Paarman of Nexus Catamarans, who travelled from St. Francis Bay to attend the event, and didn't hesitate to give it a glowing review. "Thanks for the informative conference. It was well worth my visit and most valuable to starting up companies." By all accounts the event was a resounding success and looks to be an annual feature on the boating calendar for years to come.
